- (Optional) Now write out your own list of factors for your dream job.

I am a conservationist / Naturalist / Designer, so through my areas of expertise, I am providing a public service to help improve society and the world

I have special skills in engineering, designing, conservation (wildlife, forestry and rural education)

In my profession, I have implemented several autonomous and semi-autonomous systems, and I have clear tasks and valuable feedback

In my profession I am employed as an operations manager, and that gives me a lot of interaction with colleagues, thus I get along with them and they get along with me

As of now, the job I am employed at does meet my basic needs, and pay is fair, and I also get added benefits alongside

I am happy with where I am, as it allows me to grow and reach my goals

- (Optional) What's the most valuable career capital you already have?

Many of my skills are transferable for any form of employment as I have acquired a vast knowledge in several departments, from management to HR to accounting to designing to client servicing, engineering, conservation and education

I am an introvert most times, but when it comes to a CSR aspect I am an extrovert. I'm liberal at times, but also conservative where necessary

I have made several connections with government to private sectors officials

I currently have two diplomas to my name and am further pursuing two bachelor's as well; however majority of my knowledge was learnt from on-field experience

I have a secure enough buffer to be self-reliant if it comes to that

- What global problems do you think are most pressing?

Personally, we face several global risks from war to global warming to minor political incidents and the advancement of AI; however, more than AI I see that global warming and the ongoing conflicts are more of a pressing issue, as AI is something that benefits us, but war and global warming are slowly destroying what we have

- (Optional) Briefly explain why you think these problems are the most pressing.

Because as war ravages, one small mistake can lead to an end of world scenario, and also with global warming, we are slowly approaching major disasters and sinking landmass which will also lead to deaths

- Do you already have a ranked short-list of 2-5 promising longer-term career options (i.e. next 3-15 years)?

Yes

- Write out your ranked list of longer-term options.

To hold a PHD in environmental sciences as well as psychology

To finish my engineering Degree

To accomplish my career goal of establishing and expanding the family business

Commit heavily into CSR work

- Now let's check your answers for common decision making mistakes.

Imagine that the option you ranked number 1, will actually turn out to be a terrible option. Where could you go looking for proof of that right now?

Write down 1-2 ideas.

The goal to finish my engineering degree as it will further delay my progression

- If your best friend was choosing between the same options as you, what would you tell them to do?

I personally would tell them that nothing is ever a lot. As long as it may take, if it's your passion, somehow accomplish it

- Now, write your final ranked short-list of 2-5 longer-term options.

Committing to CSR work more,

Getting my PHD in environmental Sciences and Psychology

|Growing my family company

Hi there,

Thanks for working through part 2 of our career planning tool! Your answers are below.

Thank you & have a nice day!

The 80,000 Hours team

- How confident are you in your shortlist of longer-term career options?

I'm confident my top option is best.

- Plan A: What steps are most useful for getting to your top option?

My initial goal will be achieved based on my career progression, as I would need at least three more years of experience to start my PHD and my plan as growing my family company is to seek experts and acquiring smaller businesses in the same sector and making the larger one to acquire a wider scale of economies.

- What might go wrong while pursuing plan A?

If something does go wrong, I will secure what I already have going on and pursue a way to modify and make it stronger

- Plan B: What are the best nearby alternatives to plan A? If your plan A goes wrong, what will you do instead?

My Family company i will make it stronger and initiate a few upgrades to scale it so it is more successful

- Plan Z: What will you do if everything goes wrong, in order to buy yourself time to get back on your feet?

If all goes wrong i will open myself to a world of many eploying opportunities and go work for a different organisation

- 1. What are your key uncertainties about your A/B/Z plan?

My only concern is time for plan A

- 2. What are you going to do to resolve these uncertainties?

employee people to help speed up the process so i can focus on my other goals

- How are you going to put your plan into action? List out your most important next steps.

Even if you're not entirely sure about your plan, it's helpful to make a list of concrete next steps you're going to take to put it into action. Big career moves are much less intimidating once broken down.

If you revise your plan, you can come back and update this list.

well i have to start by employing the right people, reorganising the hierarchical structure, implementing new systems and promoting the business

- Does your plan involve talking to someone?

Yes

- Nice, now you have a list of clear next steps. The final thing is to set some review points to make sure you follow through.

What signs would show this plan is wrong?

the physical constraints and workload associated

- When are you next going to review your plan?

2030/01/05

- Would you like us to email you your plan?

Yes
